POETRY.

TRANSLATION FROM "VITA DE PETRARCA."

The favorite haunt of Petrarch was among some romantic copes in the neighborhood of Avignon, where he oftentimes met Laura. When she was not there, every object spoke of her adored presence, and recalled a thousand pleasing sensations. He was meditating one day, in this enchanting place, on the continued object of his thoughts, when, under the influence of love and melancholy, he wrote the following lines:—

Sweet limpid stream, forever fresh and clear,
On whose bosom, Laura's charms appear;
Ye fragrant flowers that deck her gentle breast,
Ye trees, beneath whose shades she loves to rest,
And all ye lovely scenes, made lovelier far
By the soft spells of beauty's guiding star!
I happily sorrow close these weary eyes,
If haply sorrow close these weary eyes—
With generous hand, strew o'er my place of rest,
This happy earth, by Laura's presence blest!
'Twill make me fearless of the grave's dark gloom,
And bless, with secret charm, my early tomb!

But when again my fair one seeks this shade,
And marks the change her cruelty has made,—
Then, like the gentle babe, when it makes known
Its soft distress, and speaks by tears alone,
Then, will she breathe the piteous sigh, nor fear
To speak in love's soft eloquence—a tear!
Then will my Laura's gentle bosom bleed,
And weep the fate her cruel love decreed.

PATCHES AND THEIR PENALTIES.

BY DOUGLAS JERROLD.

"To pick a hole in a man's" popularly implies to do his character an injury. The phrase contains a subtler meaning—a significance more recondite: the evil is not in the "hole" itself, but in the patch made indispensable by the wound. There was deep philosophy in the saying of the wit, who averred that a hole might pass for an accident—but a darn was open and avowed poverty. The patch to an elaborate declaration of penury—a pains-taking manifesto—an outward and visible sign of inward destitution. Tatters may be a fine, swash-buckler libertine; but a patch is poor-spirited want; crawling, needful misery. How many think it nothing to have a thousand holes picked in their coats, who would fume and glow, and turn purple with shame to confront the stare of the world with a patch! To amend is to be lost.

But a few days since, we witnessed a pertinent illustration of the worldly impolicy of patching. It was the Sabbath—a day when, according to certain gentle Christians, sackcloth and ashes should be the only wear—and a mother, with her three children, presented herself at the gate of the inner enclosure of St. James's Park. The woman carried an infant, and two little boys were close to her apron-strings. She was proceeding with her little ones into the holy of holies, when the liveried functionary at the lodge stopped forward, barring the way. The boys instinctively shrank closer to their mother, and looked with curious eyes at what seemed to them the mysterious pantomime of the beadle. Indeed, the woman herself at first appeared unconscious of the meaning of the arm that "sawed the air" with authoritative motion. At length she was given to understand that she must turn back—there was no admittance. She looked an inquiring look at the officer—a look that plainly asked—"Why so?"

The mother herself was poorly but cleanly habited. It was evident she had donned her best—had quitted her room, probably in some pent-up, squalid court or miserable alley, to come with her children, and breathe an hour's fresh air, in sight of shrubs and trees, and green grass. It may be she had for some days promised to take her young ones "to see the swans;" they had come out for a holiday! The boys were fine little fellows; and their clean shining faces, and smoothly combed hair, bore witness to the maternal attentions. Their shoes showed no hole, and their long Holland pinafores seemed white as washing could make them. Indeed the whole group was a picture of clean, pains-taking poverty—an honest pride had given the most cheerful outside to penury. However, the beadle liked not the tailor of the family, and they must go back. Still the woman, having glanced at her boys, her baby, and herself, could not understand "why" they should go back. As she cast a second look at the beadle, it seemed more impetively to demand the reason of exclusion? The beadle pointed to the pinafores of the children; they were snow-white, it was true; but they were—yes, ye poor mothers, and ye poor little boys!—they were—they were they were patched! Not only in one or two places, but in a dozen were they patched! The mother could not deny the evidence; the children were branded; even the excess of maternal love could not gloss the sin; and without seeking to excuse it, the woman meekly turned away—the boys casting a lingering look at the gravel-walks, the water, and green sward. Cornelia showed her sons as her jewels; the sentiments, the valuation, was admitted; but then the Roman boys had no patch in their garments—they were jewels; now, little English boys, with patched pinafores, are only paste.

The scene attempted to be described, conveying as it did a type, an image of a great social evil, was still more fully worked out by the incident which followed it. The mother and her young ones, denied recreation within the enclosure, stood outside, with no complacent eyes surveying the privileged folks within. The two boys, who at first entered the gate with cheerful faces, now stood trying to poke their heads through the iron railing, and, with sullen looks, endeavoring to catch a glimpse of the swans and water-fowl, fed by happier children (without patches) on the bank. This may, perhaps, be called a puerile matter; but surely there are some who may see in it a deep significance; a serious drama—albeit, the vicinity of Buckingham Palace be the scene; and a poor woman, with three children, and a beadle, be the dramatic persona.

Magna reverentia debetur pueris, saith the ancient. The lecture on patches, given by the beadle to the boys, is not likely to be lost upon them: such seed, fall where it will, falls not on barren ground; and as the seed, so the fruit. Are figs to be gathered from brambles? What a ridiculous sermon, (saith one), on the patched pinafores of two little boys! We forget that the little boys and girls of to-day will make the stirring world of a few years hence. We are too apt to talk of the world as a mere figure of speech—forgetful that it is composed of so many million hearts and minds, each made what they are by the operation of early sentiments.

Now the sentiment preached to the two boys—and it is a sentiment preached from a thousand social pulpits—nay, it is the every-day text—tells them that poverty is the great sin. The essence of the homily is contained in this brief advice—"Plunder, but never patch."

The Bank Report.—When the report of the Congressional Committee, upon the refusal of the Bank to submit to an investigation of its proceedings, first arrived, the federal papers were a loss to know what to say, or how to steer. The conduct of the Bank shew such conclusive marks of guilt that they dared not defend it. They waited for orders, before they moved. Having got their cue, they now begin to justify the Bank in refusing to submit to any investigation ordered by Congress, though the charter expressly reserves this right to Congress—and though, on the commonest principles of propriety, the people of the United States, owning a fifth of the stock, and being partners in the concern, have a right to know how its affairs are managed and its funds are invested. This will not do—none but the guilty seek concealment. Men of fair dealing, of honest intentions, would court, not avoid, investigation—and especially would they avoid any resistance to the execution of the laws. We wish to see the anti-Masons show a proper regard, and give their expression of opinions on the subject of "the supremacy of the laws," and against secret proceedings. As for the federalists, we expect they will go for the Bank—the blacker its corruptions, the better they will relish it.

The arrival of the Potomac in our harbor being at this moment a matter of general conversation, the following scrap from our naval history will be read with interest by those who may not have seen it before:—

The official order of Com. PREBLE, for burning the frigate Philadelphia, in the harbor of Tripoli.

"United States Constitution, }
"Syracuse Harbor, Jan. 31, 1834. }
"The prize ketch, which I have named the Intrepid, and prepare her with all possible despatch, for a cruise of 30 days, with full allowance of water, provisions, &c. for seventy-five men. I shall send you five midshipmen from the Constitution, and you will take seventy men from the Enterprise, if that for boarding and burning the Philadelphia, in the harbor of Tripoli; if not, report to me, and I will forward you men to complete your complement. It is expected you will be ready to sail to-morrow evening, or possibly earlier, if the signal is made for that purpose. It is my order that you proceed to Tripoli, in company with the Syren, Lieutenant Stewart, and the Intrepid, and make good your retreat, with the Intrepid, if possible; unless you can make her the means of destroying the enemy's vessels in the harbor by converting her into a fire ship for that purpose, and retreating in your boats, and those of the Syren."

"You must take ammunition, and apparatus, for the frigate's eighteen pounders; and if you can, without risking too much, you may endeavor to make them instruments of destruction to the shipping and towers of the city. You will provide all the necessary combustibles for burning and destroying ships. The destruction of the Philadelphia is an object of great importance, and I rely with confidence on your intrepidity and enterprise to effect it. Lieutenant Stewart will support you with the boats of the Syren, and cover your retreat with that vessel. Be sure and set fire in the gun room berths—cockpit—store rooms forward and berths on the deck. After the ship is well on fire, point two of the eighteen pounders, shotted, down the main hatch, and blow her bottom out."

"On boarding the frigate, it is probable you may meet with resistance. It will be well, in order to prevent alarm, to carry all by the sword. May God prosper and succeed you in this enterprise."

"I have the honor to be, &c."

"Lieut. Commandant Decatur, Intrepid."

We scarcely need add, that the order was executed to the very letter, in the most intrepid and masterly manner.

"Revolution"!—We understand there was something of a rebellion among the students of Harvard College, yesterday. It seems that President Quincy had threatened to send the whole Sophomore class to jail, in consequence of some injury done to the furniture of one of the Public Halls, and that the class offered the threat by a disturbance during prayers. This produced a rebuke and dismissal; upon which all the remaining classes took part against the Government, and the treason became universal. We have not learned the result.

Extra Globe.—Mr Blair, of the Washington Globe, has issued proposals for publishing an Extra. It will commence on the 14th of June, and continue to be published for six months, at the very low price of $1.—Every Democrat in the United States should take it.

Slander.—During a late term of court, in New-Berlin, Pa., a case for slander was tried, in which Henry Barn was plaintiff, and George Ulrich, defendant. The parties were both Germans—both respectable farmers—and the words uttered, were Ehr hut mein Plough-line gestohlen, or, in plain English—"He stole my Plough-line." The case was ably argued on both sides. The jury retired a short time, and brought in a verdict for the plaintiff, of one hundred and twenty-five dollars and costs!

The Mobile Com. Register mentions a report that Boynton, the supposed murderer of Frost, had been arrested and committed to prison, at Claiborne—but adds that it cannot trace the report to any authentic source.

As near as can be ascertained, the villains who recently robbed the mail in Connecticut, obtained only $24 for their trouble.

The London correspondent of the N. Y. Journal of Commerce states that 5,000 citizens have fallen in Lyons, by the troops of Louis Philippe.

Mr Barrymore—to whom we are indebted for a season of active employment, in ministering to our gratification—takes a benefit at the Tremont Theatre this evening, upon which occasion Mrs Barrymore will appear in a variety of new dances, well worth seeing.

Warren Theatre.—The pretty Miss Lane announces her name for a Benefit this evening at the Warren. She offers three new pieces—Lo Zingaro, the meaning of which title we will not attempt to translate;—the Wrong Box, and the new Barletta of the Sons of Neptune, which has created quite an excitement among the jolly boys of the Potomac.

We perceive by the New York Whig, that the "Italian Tragedy of Metamora," was to be acted at the Bowery Theatre on Monday evening last.

Mazepa is having "a great run" at the Mobile Theatre.

Locusts.—We find by our exchange papers, that the Locusts made their regular septendecennial appearance in different parts of the country, with great regularity, on the 25th inst., and although we have seen nothing of them in this city, as yet, we have no reason to expect that they will long delay their coming. Their visits in this country have thus far been comparatively harmless, when we consider the well authenticated accounts of their ravages in the Eastern world; yet it is asserted that during their previous visits in some parts of New England, they not only ate up the grass in the fields, but actually attacked clothing and fences to appease their hunger.

In Syria, Egypt, and nearly all the south of Asia, they make their appearance in immense and innumerable swarms, directed in their flight by a leader, whose course they are said to follow with great exactness. They are, almost invariably, the precursors of a famine, in the countries we have mentioned; as, to pass over whole provinces, and leave them but barren wastes, is to them but the work of a few hours. Their bite is considered poisonous to vegetation, so that they almost invariably destroy the life of the little that they want to spare them to leave undevoured.

In 1797, according to Barrow, Southern Africa was visited by them in such quantities, that, according to the account given by him, they covered an area of 2000 square miles—while the water of a very wide river which lay in their course, was so covered with the dead carcasses that floated on its surface, that its water was hardly visible. They were finally destroyed (as they invariably are) by a tempestuous wind, which drove them into the sea; and when they were afterwards washed upon the shore, they made a bank four feet high, and fifty miles in length.

The Journal of Commerce cites Pallas' travels in Russia, as giving a minute description of their progress in that country. He says, after getting started in the morning, they do not halt until evening, and proceed, without touching each other, at little distances, uniformly in the same course, frequently "at the rate of a hundred fathoms a day, until they acquire wings, when they progressively disperse, but still fly about in large swarms." In 1650, they entered Russia in three different places, and afterwards spread themselves over Poland and Lithuania. In 1478, 30,000 persons are said to have perished in the Venetian territory, in consequence of a famine occasioned by their ravages. And it is stated in Irby and Mangle's travels in Egypt and Syria, that they almost annually pass the southern extremity of the Dead Sea, on their way to Gaza. They visited Great Britain in 1788, but disappeared without propagating.

It is well known that in Southern Africa, they are eaten by both men and beasts—and prepared for the palate of the former by being stripped of their wings and legs, and then roasted, and pulverized.

There are several descriptions of locusts in the United States. The Encyclopedia Americana, in speaking of the 17 years' Locusts, as they are called, says:—

"These insects emerge from the ground towards the end of April, and always during the night. On their first coming out, they are in the pupa state; but the black soon bursts, and the perfect fly appears. They begin to lay eggs about the end of May; these are deposited in close lines of two inches long, in the tender twigs of trees. As soon as the young attain their growth, in the grub state, they fall to the ground, and make their way two or three feet underneath the surface, in order to undergo their change into the pupa form. Soon after attaining their last transformation, they are found in great numbers over large districts of country."

"This insect is the favorite food of various species of animals. Immense numbers are destroyed by the hog, before they emerge from the ground; they are, also, when in their perfect state, eagerly devoured by squirrels. Some of the larger birds are also fond of them. The Indians likewise consider them as a delicate food when fried. In New Jersey, they have been converted into soap. It is stated, on good authority, that they never light on the pine, nor does the female deposit her eggs in this tribe of trees."

The rumor that the Bank of Millington, (Md.) had stopped payment, is confirmed.

The health of Mobile is improved—no epidemic disease prevails there.

The Vermont Anti-Masonic State Convention have nominated Gov. Palmer for a re-election.

Plate of the Presidents of the United States.—We are gratified to learn that the proprietor of the New York Mirror has determined to postpone the publication of the next volume of his excellent work. This has been done in order to give the artists a fair opportunity of presenting the public with a specimen of the fine arts unrivalled in the country.—N. Y. Star.

A committee appointed to investigate the subject of preparing means to prevent the inundation of New Orleans by Lake Ponchartrain, have reported favourably. They urge the necessity of having the marshes in the vicinity of the city drained, and placed under cultivation, or converted into walks and gardens, affording a retreat for the citizens, and adding to the salubrity of the air.—The sum of $64,000 is all that is required to carry this project into execution.—Eve. Star.

Boston and Providence Rail Road.—This road is now in rapid progress, and is nearly ready for the cars as far as the Low Plain in Dedham. It is expected they will be put on for an experiment on Wednesday next. Five or six have been constructed and are ready for the road. The Boston Depot of this road is at the south west corner of the Common, in Pleasant street, where buildings are constructed for the necessary offices of the Company. This road crosses the Worcester track on the back bay.—Trans.

We learn from the Centinel that the widow of the late Hon. Christopher Gore, recently deceased, has left donation of 40 or $50,000 to Harvard University, which will probably be applied to the erecting of a building for the library to be called "Gore Hall."—Ibid.

Criminal Outrage.—The church, called St. Mathew's, in Manchester village, on the west side of the Schuylkill, near this city, was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday evening. There is not the slightest doubt that this conflagration was the work of an incendiary.—Phila. Int.

The latest information from Mr Madison, we are happy to learn, left him convalescent, with strong hopes of his recovery from his late severe attack of disease.—Nat. Intelligencer.

Lithotomy.—Dr Mott, on Saturday last, performed an operation upon a young man, 26 years of age, who had been for a long time afflicted with stone. The operation was completely successful, and the stone weighed 17 oz. 3 dwts. avoidupois!—Dem. N. Y. Chron.

POLICE COURT.

A dangerous member of Society.—A painter, by the name of William Wise, was employed, on the 28th of April, to paint the lower rooms of a dwelling house, in the attic of which there was a quantity of female clothing hung up, as was supposed by the owners, out of the reach of danger from the undried paint; but they did not think it necessary to put them beyond the reach of the painter, and the next morning it was discovered that three silk gowns, worth $15, had been removed, and, upon inquiry, it was also ascertained that Wise had not returned to his usual boarding-house. He succeeded in keeping out of sight till Wednesday evening, when he was tracked to a tavern on the new land, from which he attempted to escape, when he suspected that he was known. When arrested, a pistol, loaded with powder and ball, and primed in good order, was found in his pocket, together with balls, powder and shot, and a phial of percussion caps. He had spent one year in the State Prison, where he probably learnt to go it on the "percussion principle."—Committed for trial at the Municipal Court, in default of bonds to the amount of $330.

Ungallant.—A lubberly lout, about 25 years of age, with tears in his eyes, and the crimson evidence of a couple of slapped cheeks, shining through his tears. "Came to get justice on the greatest tyrant of a woman that ever lived, for slapping his face just for nothing, and calling him indifferent names."—The Court thought "'twas hardly worth while to mind a woman."—Comp: "Yes, yer honor, but if a woman was to kill ye, and tyrannicalise over ye, would'n't it feel just as bad as if a man did it?"—Court: "Well, bring somebody that saw her do it, and we'll grant a warrant."—Comp: "I'll do that thing."

A most grave and reverend darkee, about 75 years of age, with a "cloud-compelling brow," wanted a warrant against a buxom black wench—the sister of a lady with whom he was on the eve of marriage. It seems that after the aged patriarch's betrothment to his dear, dark flame had been published, her sister forbade the banns, and continually annoyed him with her railleury and abuse upon the disparity of their ages. No help granted.

Miscellaneous Extracts.

Ornaments of African Women.—Several women visited our party; they wore belts of large beads, cut out of the columns of conch shells, and had one custom which we nowhere else observed. This consisted of having the upper lip bored through, into which was introduced a piece of ivory or shell, made in the shape of a horn, very smooth, and about three inches in length. The extremity of this being in the mouth, the lady's principal amusement appeared to be in keeping it in constant motion with the tip of her tongue.—Capt Owen's Narrative.

Cool as a Cucumber.—A grave digger in a neighboring parish was busily employed the other day in preparing the last home for the remains of a deceased parishioner, when two gentlemen passed the man of spades and mattocks, at his melancholy employment.—"Whose grave is this?" asked one of the gentlemen of the venerable and hoary headed sexton. "It's for my third wife, sir," responded he of the mortcloth, "and I'm taking up my first wife to let her rest in her place." There's her bones (casting them out) enuch; and there's my second wife lying aside (clapping an adjacent grave with his shovel); fa ken's but I may put my fourth in her place. Oh it's an awful world! Ay, ay! Loh: een: Ocu, een:—A. D. C.

Is the Moon Inhabited?—Telescopes must be greatly improved before we can expect to see signs of inhabitants, as manifested by edifices or by changes on the surface of the soil. It should, however, be observed that, owing to the small density of the materials of the moon, and the comparative feeble gravitation of bodies times as far in overcoming the weight of materials as on earth. Owing to the want of air, however, it seems impossible that any form of life analogous to those on earth can subsist there. No appearance indicating vegetation, or the slightest variation of surface, which can be fairly ascribed to change of season, can anywhere be fairly discerned.—Sir J. Herschell on Astronomy.

M. Dabouval, who was fencing master to Napoleon, at the school of Brienne, lately died at Nogent-sur-Seine, at the age of eighty-six. He cherished almost a religious veneration for the memory of his illustrious pupil, and he carefully preserved a mask and three foils which Bonaparte used when under his tuition. He has bequeathed these relics to his friend, M. Bertrand de Lozes, fencing master to the Princes of Borghese.

Baron Hagel, the Austrian botanist, who lately visited the Neilgherry Hills, in India, declares that there alone, exceed ten thousand. The wild rose runs thick over the top of the highest trees, and grows to the thickness of four or five inches. A delicious species also found there. In the orange valley below the tagberry, about 4,500 feet above the level of the sea, numerous fruit trees are found, among which the wild fig and lemon tree, the latter bearing fruit little inferior in size and flavor to that of Spain.

The King of Bavaria is desirous of realizing the idea of Charlemagne, viz.—the junction of the Danube and the Rhine. The plan of this gigantic enterprise is said to be already drawn up, and will speedily come under discussion.

A Spanish Journal states that a lady in Madrid, named Dona Mercedes de Mendoza, awoke on the 15th of February last from a trance, in which she had lain for four years. During that period she never tasted food, but she is now in perfect health.

Feelings.—You meet in this world with false mirth as often as with false gravity—the grinning hypocrite is not a more uncommon character than the groaning one. As much light discourse comes from a heavy heart as from a hollow one—and from a full mind as from an empty head.

Love.—You call me your life. Ah! change the word. Life is as transient as the inconstant sigh. Say rather I'm your soul—more just that name, for, like the soul, your love can never die.

Justice.—At the late term of the Lincoln Superior Court, in North Carolina, an action of slander was tried, in which a young woman by the name of Blakely, was plaintiff, and Joshua Wilson, defendant. Wilson argued his own case, at some length, and demanded justice; which the editor of the Carolinian, thinks he got, in a verdict of six hundred dollars damages for the plaintiff.

"Massa," said a Southern negro, as he was examining the many rents in his brogans, "wonder where'er shoes co' from?"—"O, they grove at the North," was the reply. "Well, guess 'er picked before 'er ripe then?"

As a specimen of brevity, the following, from a Virginia paper, is not bad:—"Cow—I have lost my cow. I want her. She is a red no horn stray cow, formerly the property of Mrs Darns."

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, on Monday, Mr Wright presented a memorial signed by the principal officers of 18 of the Banks in the city of New York, praying Congress to pass a law regulating the gold and silver coin of the U. States, and the value of foreign coin.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the special order—being the report of the Committee on the Judiciary relative to the conduct of the Bank of the United States on the Pension Fund. Amendatory resolutions were adopted, declaring no power is conferred by any law upon the Department or Secretary of War to remove the agency for the payment of pensions, under the said act of 7th June, 1832, and that the Department of War is not warranted in appointing Pension Agents in any State or Territory where the Bank of the United States, or one of its branches have been established, except when specially authorized by act of Congress.

In the House, nothing of interest transpired, except the reception of a Message from the President, transmitting a letter referring to the petition of certain descendants of the Count de Rochambeau, and a petition from the heirs of Baron De Kalb, (accompanied by a note from General Lafayette,) praying remuneration for services rendered by the Baron, to the U. States, during the war of the revolution.

Scraps from Antiquity.

Charlemagne made sumptuary laws to restrain the luxury of his nobility and gentry; and made use of a whimsical contrivance to shew them, that silk clothes are not fit for men. He drew them along with him a hunting, one rainy day, through woods and rugged places; and when they returned, he permitted none of them to change their dress, saying, their cloths would dry best on their backs by the fire, which shrivelled all their furs, torn before in the woods. He ordered them to come to court the next day in the same cloths. When the court was full, looking round upon them, 'what a tattered company have I about me,' says he, 'while my sheep-skin cloak, which I turn this way or that, as the weather sets, is not at all worse for yesterday's wear. For shame, learn to dress like men, and let the world judge of your ranks from your merit, not from your habit. Leave silks and finery to women; or to those days of pomp and ceremony, when robes are worn for show, and not for use.'

Rome was never ruined, till her balance being broken, the nobility forsaking their ancient virtue, abandoned themselves to their lusts; and the senators, who, as in the case of Jugurtha, were all bribed, turned knaves; at which turn, all their skill in government (and in this never men had been better skilled) could not keep the commonwealth from overturning. Cicero, an honest man, labored might and main; Pomponius Atticus, another, despaired; Cato tore out his own bowels; the poignards of Brutus and Cassius neither considered prince nor father; but the commonwealth had sprung her planks, and split her ballast; the world could not save her.

At Athens, the court of Areopagus was to take care, that no person lived in idleness, and that no man carried on two employments. If a father did not take care to have his son instructed in some art, by which he might live, the son was not obliged to maintain the father, when past labor.

The good Emperor Aurelius sold the plate, furniture, jewels, pictures, and statues of the imperial palace, to relieve the distresses of the people, occasioned by the invasion of barbarians, pestilence, famine, &c. the value of which was so great, that it maintained the war for five years, besides other inestimable expenses.

The nobles of Spain grew so effeminate in the time of Ferdinand and Isabel, that they would not ride upon horses; but chose mules, because their motion is gentler and easier. So that the breed of horses would have been lost, if the king had not given an order about preserving it.

When the daughter of the brave Admiral Coligni (who was murdered on account of religion, in the horrible massacre of St. Bartholomew) went to be married to the Prince of Orange, at the Hague, her carriage was a covered cart, in which she sat on a board.

The Small Pox seems pretty generally to have disappeared in this city; at least we have heard of no new cases for several days.—Thursday's Providence Journal.

The maritime city of Chien-Chow in China, had nearly been swept away by a sudden burst of water through a ravine, upwards of 18,000 houses were destroyed together with a number of the inhabitants, who were drowned.

The N. York Journal of Commerce says that the leaves killed by frost, a week or two ago are falling off, and new ones putting out; that the fruit has not been killed by the cold, as was thought to be the case, but is growing famously.

A couple of dashing blades, while driving at a rapid rate through Ninth street, Philadelphia, when in the act of turning a corner came in contact with a watch box, and were thrown out of the gig and materially injured.

Two cases of stabbing occurred in New York since Friday. In both cases the assailants were engaged in a quarrel with females, and the persons stabbed had interfered to create peace.

A Wilmington, N. C. paper of the 21st inst. states that for the last ten days, the weather has been unusually cool for the season. Frost has been observed in one instance during the time.

We are informed that there has been more Cotton exported from this country in the last six months to Europe, than in the entire year previous.—N. Y. Times.

The lighter Lucy White was upset in the North River on Saturday night, and two hands, Andrew Collins and John McDovett, were drowned.

A letter from Wilkesbarre, Penn., dated May 15th, says,—"All kinds of fruit trees are destroyed. The ground was covered with snow last evening."

The collection of the revenue of the state of North Carolina, falls short annually twenty thousand dollars of the amount which ought to be paid in.

It is said that our countryman Cooper, is now engaged upon a work which will probably be entitled, "A Comparative View of France and the United States."

The Attorney General of the United States, B. F. Butler, Esq. is now on a visit to Albany.

Louis Philippe is said to be personally interested in most of the existing monopolies of France.

Two shocks of an earthquake occurred at Montpelier, Vt., on Monday last.

Two young men have been arrested in New York for disturbing a Methodist congregation.

THE LAST SUPPER.—The Proprietor of this Magazine, in Wax, of the LORD'S SUPPER, respectfully informs the public that at the suggestion of many individuals, the Exhibition, heretofore, will be open at the Masonic Temple, EVERY EVENING.

By this arrangement, an opportunity to witness this beautiful specimen of Art, will be afforded to those whose occupations preclude the possibility of attending such Exhibitions during the day.
